ent of the Cincinnati Commercial. paid a visit to General Sherman, and it is reported the distinguished Commander of the American Army, expressed himself very freely on various subjects.

"The colored people," said the General, "were just recently created, and needed the fostering and preserving care of the National Government. They had been true to the nation in the darkest tempest of the repellion, and their votes had the rebellion, and their votes had done much to strengthen and con solidate the great party of freedom, and for the Government now to desert them would be the most wicked ingratitude. It was eminently the duty of the philanthropist and humanitarians to continue in their benevolent endeavors to elevate and prepare for the tremendous responsibilities of political life the four millions of people."

The name of General Howard was mentioned, and then Sherman spoke in the highest terms. He
